MADNESS.

AN effectual remedy on the human body, for that dreadful malady the bite of mad animals—it being the remedy that Dr. Stoy of Lebanon, of Pennsylvania, has effected to many cures with—A number of persons have been cured by Dr. Stoy and myself, that had violent symptoms of the hydrophobia, from one 'til two days raging. The cure can be effected as long as the constituent part of the blood is not separated; which will happen sooner or later, according to the state of body, or the effect of the bite. I would advise every person to make application as soon as the person has received the infection. No trust can be expected for the above.

AN ADDRESS
Of the Trustees of the Transylvania
University, to the Public.

Transylvania University, Lexington.
THE Trustees of the Transylvania University, are happy to announce to the public, the prosperous condition of the Seminary committed to their direction. It is also with uncommon satisfaction, they inform the public, that they have procured an Apparatus for Experimental Philosophy. Most of the articles, such as could be procured in America, have already come forward, and are of a superior quality. A few articles, such as an Orrery, &c. which could not be procured in the Atlantic States, the Trustees have sent to Europe for, and expect them with the fall arrivals. When these come to hand, the apparatus may be considered complete.

To the apparatus hitherto usual at seminaries of learning, the Trustees have thought proper to add the essential parts of a chemical apparatus, together with a galvanic battery. The library, which formerly consisted of about 1300 volumes, has also received an addition of some of the latest and most useful publications on various subjects.

The Trustees, deeply impressed with the necessity of having the means of instruction in the Western country, have made the foregoing arrangements; and have exerted themselves to the utmost of their funds; and are now happy in assuring the public, that it is their opinion, that a liberal education can be obtained in this State with as much facility and certainty as any where else in America, and certainly with much less expence.

The establishment of the University, consists of a President, and two Professors; and the French Language will continue to be taught, so long as a suitable person can be procured, for the accommodation of such as may be desirous of learning that language.

The Trustees thought it their duty, to give the public at large this information, respecting the institution itself.—They have a few communications which they beg leave to make to parents and guardians, who may be disposed to send their sons to the University.

Provision is made for the reception of young men who do not design to complete a regular course of education. They do sincerely lament that this mode of education, so generally prevails: and do earnestly recommend, that the plan of education be greatly enlarged. But when young men are sent to the University, designing only a partial course of study, they should be sent, if possible, at the commencement of the spring session, as the junior class in the University, will be studying the mathematics during the summer, whereas their winters will be devoted to philosophy.

The spring session commences on the first Monday in May, and the fall session the first Monday in November and great care should be taken that all the students be present at the very beginning of the term: a few days absence will subject them to considerable loss, and the Professors to great inconveniences.

No student can be admitted into the University, until he has produced a satisfactory certificate of his good moral conduct.

To those who are only taking a partial course of education, such a certificate shall be given, when they leave the University, as their progress shall justify, signed by the President.

The course of study pursued at the University by those who aim at a liberal education, and seeking degrees, is as follows: Virgil, Horace, Cicero, Xenophon, and Homer; Geography, Logic, Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Navigation, Conic Sections, Natural Philosophy, Chemistry, Astronomy, Chronology, and the general principles of History, Moral Philosophy, including Politics, and the leading principles of Jurisprudence, English Grammar, Rhetoric, Belles Lettres, and Criticism.

It has been, hitherto, the practice with many parents, to send their sons to this University, to do what they call study the sciences. Such a course continued, often, no longer than six months. They take the liberty of saying, that this is a very unhappy arrangement, and can never accomplish any thing very valuable. It frequently happens that just as a young man's mind is opening to receive instruction he is removed.

The Trustees, impressed with the truth of the foregoing remark, have thought proper to recommend, that no student be sent to the Transylvania University for a shorter term than one year.

The price of tuition is, £6 for scientific students, and £4 for students of the languages, per annum, which is to be paid quarterly, in advance.

The Trustees beg leave to inform the public, that the necessary expences of this University for one year, including boarding, tuition, the use of the library, and firing for the recitation room, does not exceed £10 dollars—beyond this, parents are earnestly requested, to be very sparing in granting money to their sons. Yet even this will have very little effect, if young men are permitted to contract what debts they may think proper. Such debts should not be contracted, and if contracted should not be paid. They have found by long experience, that nothing is so pernicious to the morals and industrious habits of students as unlimited credit, or large remittances of money.

The Trustees consider the moral conduct and principles of youth sent to the University, as a matter of the last consequence. Upon this subject, every possible care will be taken; and as many of the corporation as live in Lexington or its vicinity, will embrace every prudent opportunity of co-operating with the constituted authorities of the University, as guardians to the young men; and will not fail to advise, admonish, and reprove, as circumstances may require.

It has been, and shall still be, the care of the Trustees and professors, to guard against the baneful influence of sceptical principles; and while they carefully prevent the inculcation of the peculiar opinions of any Christian sect, they feel themselves bound to see, that the grand leading doctrines and duties of Christianity be warmly inculcated, both by precept and example.

The Trustees have also provided, that on proper application, a certain number of students may every year, receive their education in the Transylvania University gratis.

But the regular method of obtaining a gratis standing, shall be as follows: a certificate, signed by two of the justices of the peace, for the county in which the applicant has resided for the last twelve months, must be produced to the chairman of the standing committee, certifying that the applicant has a good moral character, and that his circumstances, or that of his parents or guardians, if he has any, are such as cannot afford him all the support which is necessary in going through a liberal course of education—the applicant shall then appear before the Faculty, who, upon examination on the progress which he has already made in any branches of learning, are to judge of his talents; and if upon examination, satisfaction is given, he may be received.

It is also determined, that students thus received, shall in every other respect, be under the same regulations, and enjoy the same privileges with the other students, and may continue in the University on this footing for two years.—It being always understood, that if any gratis student does not make his appearance in the course of a month after the beginning of a session, his place is vacated, except he has been detained by sickness.

The number of students thus admitted, shall not exceed one for every fifteen who are admitted in the common method, until the whole number of the students in the University shall be 112.—When this number is made up, the proportions between the gratis and other students may if necessary, be as 1 to 10.

Finally, the Trustees will acknowledge with due sentiments, their obligations to those authors who may furnish the University with a copy of their works; and to every inventor or improver of an useful machine, who may bestow on it a model and explanation of his invention or improvement. All specimens, likewise, calculated to illustrate natural history, and all specimens of elegant execution in the fine arts, shall be thankfully received.

From the Richmond Enquirer of Sept. 17
WAR WITH TRIPOLI.

The sovereignty of Tripoli is an hereditary monarchy.—But like all other unsettled governments the crown is not always certain to remain on the head of the oldest son. The present Bashaw furnishes us with an opposite illustration.—His father fatigued with the cares of sovereignty, or anxious to establish his favorite son upon the throne, determined like Charles V. to abdicate his powers, and resign them to his eldest son, the present exiled Bashaw.—But the dignity of the sovereignty was insufficient to prevent the dissensions of the royal family.

—The younger brother, the present Bashaw, inflamed with the love of power or the desire of revenge, determined to supplant him. He covered his design under the most specious pretexts; representing his eldest brother as his most inveterate enemy, and as incapable of reigning over the inhabitants of Tripoli.—His ambitious views were crowned with success. He drove Sidi Hamet from the throne and from Tripoli; retaining his wife and children as hostage for his good behavior. But he did not himself accept of the crown before he had offered to replace it on the head of his father.

Since that period, the family of the exiled Bashaw has remained within the walls of Tripoli.—It consists of his wife and three children. His eldest daughter was married last winter to the eldest son of the reigning Bashaw. Hence when the terms of the treaty have been complied with, he will only recover his wife and two of his children.

The Ex-Bashaw himself has hitherto resided in Egypt. Whatever magnificent promises he made to Gen. Eaton or the American government, the scanty preparations which he formed are sufficient to prove that he was not possessed of very extensive resources. The combined army with which he and Gen. Eaton set out on their career of conquest, did not exceed three hundred men. Eaton's little band consisted of about ten Americans, and a body of about ten Greeks, who had been shipwrecked on the coast of Alexandria; the Ex-Bashaw's army was composed of not more than two hundred and fifty soldiers.—The two generals though they acted in concert, had the exclusive command of their own army. They left Egypt about the early part of April; crossed the desert of Barca, in the midst of astonishing difficulties and arrived in the latter end of April before Derne, on the frontiers of Tripoli; and on the sea coast longitude 22, 45, E. latitude 32, 55, N. It was defended by an army of five or six hundred Arabs.—Not deterred, however, by the difficulties of the undertaking, the Ex-Bashaw and Eaton on the 27th of April attacked the town in different quarters at the same time, whilst Capt. Hull in the Argus, Capt. Dent in the Nautilus, and Lieut. Evans of the Harriet bomb ketch, played off on the sea-side against the only fort, which defended the town.—Derne was captured.

This victory was, however, succeeded by a second action. The Bashaw of Tripoli having had intelligence of the march of the enemy, had dispatched about two thousand Arabs to the defence of Derne, under an expectation that they would arrive there before the enemy.—They did not, however, arrive until two days after Derne was taken.

On the 15th of May, a battle was fought between the forces of Sidi Hamet and those of the reigning Bashaw. For a long time, the victory was doubtful, but at length Hamet's troops were forced to give way. The enemy pursued them into the town, until Gen. Eaton, very judiciously turned the guns of the fort where he was stationed, upon the Bashaw's troops, and compelled them to retreat in a most disorderly manner, and under the destructive fire of the American vessels in the harbor. It was expected by Gen. Eaton, when he reached Derne, that he should receive a large reinforcement of men and money from the navy of the United States; with these he intended to march to Braganza, another Tripolitan town on the sea-coast, after which he expected that his army would be conveyed in the American vessels across the Gulf of Sydra; the much celebrated Syrtis of antiquity. But these reinforcements were not wanting on account of the events, which afterwards occurred.—That we may lay open the secret spring of these events, let us once more return to the Disson of Tripoli.

It was one of the customs of the Bashaw to have the most important parts of the American newspapers regularly translated for his own inspection.—Among other articles of considerable importance, he was particularly struck with the part of the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, which mentions the duration and probable amount of the Mediterranean fund. A tax which was estimated to produce not less than 550,000 dollars, and was intended to continue until the expiration of the war with Tripoli, affected him with surprise and apprehension.—He saw that the spirit of the American nation was yet unbroken: He saw that they were determined to carry on the war until they could bring it to an honorable accommodation. What efforts could he expect to make in opposition to a nation, which would thus contribute "millions for defence but not a cent for tribute"? Such were the reflections that passed through the Bashaw's mind and such according to the opinion of our captive countrymen, were the first inducements that prompted him to make propositions for peace.—The reader will remark that these propositions were made before Gen. Eaton commenced his daring enterprise, and before Derne was taken. They were made by the Bashaw as early as the month of February. But Mr. Lear who it may be supposed was commissioned with full power to negotiate, did not conceive that the proper moment of negotiation had arrived. He consequently refused to listen to the propositions of the Bashaw; nor did he deviate from this resolution until the capture of Derne struck an awful alarm into the heart of the Bashaw, and induced him to repeat his propositions for peace. This was the critical moment for acceding to his terms: The Bashaw of Tripoli had been alarmed for the prosperity of his dominion; his cruisers were blocked up in his harbours by the American squadron: his treasury had been drained of no less than 4 or 500,000 dollars for carrying on the war; But now a more serious cause of alarm had seized upon him. He trembled for the very safety of his dominions. Derne had been captured; an army of 2000 men had been defeated by an invading enemy. Had he been able to ascertain the precise number of that army, he might perhaps have learned to despise their power. But it was the interest of the bey of Derne to justify his own cowardice by exaggerating the force of his opponents. He had multiplied the amount and magnified the valour of the American forces, and to the apprehensive imagination of the Bashaw, there seemed to be an army hovering over the very capital of his dominions. Our informants are not certain whether he had gone so far as to adopt any ultimate precaution for his safety. They do not recollect to have heard that any measures had been thrown out that the moment of Gen. Eaton's approach should become the signal of death not only to the American, but to all the christian captives. But they recollect to have received some information from Mr. Cowdry that the Bashaw had collected together all the jewels and his women, and that he intended in case of the most urgent danger to retire with the American captives into the desert of Barca. By no series of events therefore that were likely to happen, would so awful an alarm have been struck into the heart of the Bashaw, and at no other period would he be so much disposed to enter into a fair and favourable treaty.—Col. Lear accordingly seized upon this fortunate and unexpected moment; he had heard too that the Emperor of Morocco was preparing to violate his faith, and co-operate with the Tripolitans: he knew also that we had several points of difference to adjust with the Bey of Tunis. Animated by these and many other considerations, Col. Lear listened to the renewed propositions of the Bashaw, and agreed to the preliminary Articles of Peace, which are substantially as follows:

The 1st article declares that there shall be from the conclusion of the Treaty of peace to be entered into between the President of the United States, and the Bashaw of Tripoli and the citizens and subjects of their respective countries, a firm, everlasting peace founded upon principles of reciprocal advantage.

The 2d article provides, that upon the conclusion of the peace, the Bashaw of Tripoli shall deliver up, resources, and honor; and in up to the American squadron now off Tripoli, all the Americans now in his possession, and on condition of their respective countries, a firm, everlasting peace founded upon principles of reciprocal advantage.

The 2d article provides, that upon the conclusion of the peace, the Bashaw of Tripoli shall deliver up, resources, and honor; and in up to the American squadron now off Tripoli, all the Americans now in his possession, and on condition of their respective countries, a firm, everlasting peace founded upon principles of reciprocal advantage.

of Tripoli, now in the power of the United States, shall be delivered up to him, and as the number of Americans in possession of the Bashaw of Tripoli, amounts to 300 men more or less, and the number of Tripoline subjects in the power of the Americans, to about 100, the Bashaw of Tripoli shall receive from the United States the sum of sixty thousand dollars, as a payment for the difference between the respective prisoners.

The 3d. article declares, that upon the conclusion of the peace aforesaid, between the United States and the regency of Tripoli, all forces of the United States, which have been or may be in hostilities against the Bashaw of Tripoli in the province of Derne, or elsewhere within the dominions of the said Bashaw shall be withdrawn therefrom, and no supplies shall be given by or in behalf of the United States, during the continuation of peace, to any of the subjects of the said Bashaw, who may be in hostilities against him, or any part of his dominions; and the Americans shall use all the means in their power, to persuade the Brother of the said Bashaw, who has co-operated with them at Derne, &c. to withdraw from the territory of the Bashaw of Tripoli, but they will not use any force or improper means to effect that object, and in case he shall withdraw himself as aforesaid, the Bashaw engages to deliver up to him, his wife and children now in his power.

Signed, June 2d, 1805.

These preliminary articles were of course entered into before the General treaty, of which they form the basis, was concluded. The articles of the general treaty consist of such only as have been made with the most favourable and powerful nations, with one exception as honorable to us as it is unprecedented in the history of Tripolitan treaties; that in case of a future war, the prisoners shall not be considered or treated as slaves, but be exchanged, man for man, according to rank or redeemed at a low stipulated rate.

By this treaty, we have not violated our compact with the exiled Bashaw, or even disappointed any expectation, which he could reasonably have formed. The U. States had always held out to him the idea, that we should have complete liberty to make a peace, whenever our own interests should demand it.—Our connection with him was always considered as a matter of co-operation, not as a compact of alliance. We have already alleviated his misfortune by obtaining the restoration of his wife and family, which is represented to have been the most formidable obstacle in the way of negotiation. And perhaps it may be incumbent upon the honor or humanity of the U. States to make some provision for his subsistence and accommodation.

The character of the two brothers is represented by our countrymen in very different colours. The deposed Bashaw, endowed with little capacity, and addicted to licentious propensities; the ruling monarch possessed of a strong understanding, capable of perceiving and estimating merit wherever it is to be found, of elevated sentiments and of aspiring ambition. His prime minister is a Russian, not remarkable for the vigour of his talents. His minister of foreign affairs, a Tripoline by birth, with endowments which would adorn any of the cabinets of Europe, is the man upon whom devolves the great burden of the government.

We have formed the most erroneous ideas of the treatment, which our countrymen received in Tripoli. There was a marked and honorable distinction between them and the other christian captives. The common seamen were not compelled to work upon the fortifications of the town longer than 4 o'clock every day; after which hour they were permitted to seek their own amusements, or labour for their own emolument. The officers were confined, but not chained, and they had every accommodation with which their own purses could supply them. From the confusions of most of the European states, they obtained all those polite attentions which are so grateful at times and more especially in a season of adversity. The cook of the Danish Consul was their purveyor in market.

His Tripolitan majesty seems indeed to have conceived the most exalted opinion of the American bravery, resources, and honor; and in every instance conducted himself towards them with the most distinguished politeness. When Col. Lear landed at Tripoli, he was inted with 9 guns instead of 7 which had been hitherto the tribute of respect.—When our countrymen left his city forever, he gave them an adieu full of politeness and sensibility.

A few more defultory facts will close this hasty sketch. Scarce had the treaty of peace been concluded, when some of the corsairs of Tripoli, once more resumed their usual occupation, repeated their incursions upon Sicily and Naples, and carried off whole families into captivity.

It has even been said that it was the fear of encountering this danger, which induced the King of Naples to refuse us the loan of his gun-boats during the present campaign.

The principal part of our Squadron is now on a visit to the Regency of Tunis, with which we have some points of difference to adjust. It will probably take a tour of the Barbary States. Should they not receive any orders to leave the Mediterranean, they will winter at Syracuse. May they soon be safely moored within our own harbours.

News from all nations humbering at his back."

LEXINGTON, OCTOBER 24.

THE Mail which arrived yesterday, furnished us with nothing from the Eastward further than Chillicothe. This must be owing to the new contracts not having got into complete operation. Our latest Philadelphia papers are only to the 3d inst. yet the contents of this Gazette will not be found uninteresting.

The small pox is said to rage with considerable violence in London, in consequence of which, the corporation have ordered a general inoculation for the cow pox.

THE following presentment was made in the Greenup Circuit Court at the August Term; and in the Fleming Circuit Court at the September Term; the Printer of the Kentucky Gazette will oblige several of his subscribers by inserting it in his paper.
October 17, 1805.

STATE OF KENTUCKY,
Fleming Circuit s^t. September Term 1805.

THE Grand jury impanelled for the Circuit aforesaid, do present, as a grievance of extreme magnitude the present mode of obtaining petit jurors in our state; experience having taught them, that the prospect of obtaining justice is rendered almost hopeless, by the indiscriminate use of jurors. They have reason to believe that justice is frequently retarded by the ignorance and design of jurors, who are either incapable of discharging the duty, or are actuated by improper motives. The Grand jury conceive they have cause to fear, that very improper practices are often resorted to by jurors, in placing jurors at hand, whose determination is, to find for their friend at all hazards; and it is observed in many cases, that in addition to the ignorance and evil intention of some jurors, others are used whose state of intoxication frequently renders them incapable of discharging this important duty with propriety. The Grand jury are of opinion, that the continuance of the present mode of obtaining juries, will be attended with so many and glaring evils, that nothing but prejudice, or a mistaken economy, can induce our state to adhere to it; therefore feel it a duty to suggest for the consideration of the state this interesting subject, in full confidence, that a radical reform will be made at the next Session of the General Assembly.

Elegant dinners have been given to capt. Bainbridge in the cities of Richmond and Washington, at which a number of toasts were given, expressing the highest approbation of the conduct of capt. Bainbridge and the crew of the Philadelphia, of the officers of the Mediterranean Squadron generally, and applauding that of Gen. Eaton.

We have received the official account of the proceedings of the Court of Enquiry in the case of Capt. Bainbridge. The following is the result of the Enquiry:

"The Court having deliberated on the evidence deduced from the testimony of the witnesses, heard in this case, are decidedly of opinion that: Captain WILLIAM BAINBRIDGE acted with fortitude and conduct in the loss of his ship, the U. S. frigate Philadelphia, on the 31st Oct. 1803, and that no degree of censure should attach itself to him from that event."

NEW-ORLEANS, Sept. 14.
We can state from a source that may be relied on, that an army of 5000 men is on its march from Mexico, to strengthen the Spanish frontiers on Louisiana. We cannot but think it would be advisable for our government to throw a few thousand troops into this country. Even though we should remain at peace, it would be well to show a state of preparation for war.

DIED—On Saturday last, at the farm of Mr. Richard Butler, about 8 leagues above this city, Col. THOMAS BUTLER, of the army of the United States. The limits of a newspaper will not permit us to do justice to the character and services of the deceased.—Let it suffice to say, that he served with distinguished merit during our revolutionary war—was the particular friend of Washington, and was ever ready to assert his country's rights, and defend her honor.

Through life, his conduct was undeviatingly that of a brave soldier and a gentleman. At the present crisis we cannot eliminate his loss. He was the darling of the army, and universally beloved wherever he was known.

From the Salem Gazette of the 24th of September.

FROM GIBRALTAR.
Capt. Williams, who arrived last evening from the Mediterranean, has obliged us with some minutes of intelligence which he had collected. He left Gibraltar the 23d of August; previous to which, they had no certain accounts of Lord Nelson; the report, however, was, that he arrived at Ferrol 2 days before the combined fleets, and not finding them there, had gone back to Newfoundland in quest of them. Neither had they any particular account of the action between Admiral Calder and the combined fleets: the official account of the Spanish Admiral was published, and stated that they had gained a victory over the British, which would have been more complete if the French had not unfortunately been too far to leeward, which brought the whole brunt of the battle upon the Spaniards: finding that 2 Spanish and 1 French ship were missing, he gave over pursuing the British, and informs that the fleet, though much dispersed, had arrived safe, part at Vigo, and part at Ferrol.

Capt. W. informs, that a few days after the action the combined fleets formed a junction at Ferrol, and with the Squadron in that port, sailed for Cadiz, where they had arrived, 30 in number, 2 days before the Friendship's sailing, and, with 5 ships in that port, formed a fleet of 35 sail of the line. This intelligence was received at Gibraltar 8 hours before Capt. W. sailed together with a further account, that the Carthage Squadron, of 3 sail of the line (the same that was to have joined the Poulton Squadron when bound down the Straits, but was not ready) had arrived at Malaga, 20 leagues from Gibraltar only. Just before sunset (says Capt. W.) an easterly wind sprung up, which the Carthage Squadron probably started as they were in plain sight from the Rock some time before dark, they created a most serious alarm at Gibraltar, all was bustle; the alarm guns were constantly firing, which were heard on board his ship till 10 o'clock at night, at which time the wind had increased to a very strong Levanter, and the night being very dark, it must have given them a fine chance to pass the Gut.

At the time the alarm was given, the Squadron under Sir R. Bickerton was at anchor in Gibraltar Bay, consisting of the Queen of 98 guns, Tonant 84, Minotaur and Bellerophon 74's, 2 frigates and 2 gun brigs. This Squadron had been some time waiting at Gibraltar for reinforcements from England, to go up and blockade the Carthage Squadron above mentioned.—Immediately after the alarm, the Squadron got underway, it was said to join the Squadron off Cadiz, under Sir Roger Curtis, who according to some accounts, had 12 sail, and according to others 8 sail of the line.

Capt. W. was informed by the American Consul, and other gentlemen at Gibraltar, that a WAR between Spain and America appeared inevitable; and that the Spaniards were in daily expectation of a war being declared against them by the United States. Mr. Pinckney, whose negotiation had failed, was expected at Tangier every moment; and Mr. Bowdoin had thought it expedient not to proceed to Madrid, as we have before known. In the mean time the Spaniards treat these things with contempt and insult, and capture the American flag daily; and the common observation is, that our government cannot much longer brook such hostile and insulting treatment.

FOR SALE,
2000 Acres of Military Land, in Barren county, which has been known by the name of the Blue Spring Grove. The title is indisputable, and a general warranty will be made. For terms apply to the subscriber near Lexington, or at Frankfort during the terms of the Court of Appeals or Federal Court.

JAMES HUGHES.
October 15, 1805.
I will rent my Office in Lexington.
J. H.

FOR SALE,
On very reasonable terms, and possession given immediately, THAT valuable and well known Tract or parcel of LAND, situated at the mouth of Tate's creek, 15 miles from Lexington, on the main road leading from Lexington to Madison court house, containing 1000 acres, or thereabouts; 200 of which is excellent bottom, the remainder hilly but well timbered; 80 acres cleared, 12 acres in clover and timothy meadow, and 25 more can be made and watered with very little expense. On the upper part of this tract is erected a merchant mill, with a new and well built hewed log dam, the situation is perfectly secure, either from back water from the river, or floods in the creek. The house is 50 feet by 40, with four floors; the mills are over shot, double geared, with a pair of French burrs and a pair of Laurel hill stones, bolting, hoisting, screening, fanning, and packing done by water.—The water empties from these mills into a pond, where stands a saw mill in good repair. There is also on the premises a good framed dwelling house, kitchen, & store house, and a large and never failing spring convenient. For further particulars enquire on the premises of ELISHA I. WINTER.

MADISON.
THE subscriber having received sufficient encouragement, has laid off into convenient lots and streets, a TOWN by the above name, on his land lying on the bank of the Ohio, about one mile above the mouth of Limestone creek. The situation of this place is extremely advantageous, it being in an extensive bottom, about three miles in length, and three quarters in depth—the landing at the town is remarkably easy and convenient, being shielded from the current by a considerable eddy. A firm and excellent road may be made with very little additional expense, leading from the town to Washington, May's Lick, Flemingsburgh, and the different licks on Licking, and from thence to the interior of Kentucky. A ferry is established over the Ohio at the town, and as a proof of the convenience of the situation for public purposes, a ship of 300 tons is now on the stocks at the place, and several valuable factories will be fixed there in a short time. It has long been the opinion of persons of observation, that some spot in the vicinity of Limestone, must eventually become the great place of deposit on the Ohio, both for importation and exportation.—It is at present the key to Kentucky, and the state of Ohio; being the important pass-way to the Atlantic states, and to the southern and western parts of the United States and Louisiana. Lots may be had on reasonable terms on application to the agent of the subscriber, who resides at the spot.

"TO SOAR ALOFT ON FANCY'S WING."

For the Kentucky Gazette.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF VIRGIL'S FIRST PASTORAL.

Melibaeus.

YOU, in loved ease, a spreading beech beneath,
Your flute melodious, haply Tityrus, breathe,
We, wretched exiles, leave our native seats
Our smiling fields, our darling green retreats:
You teach the shades the breathing sweets of love,
And Amarillis' charms fill every grove.

Tityrus.

A heaven born youth my balmy peace redeem'd
The youth by me a god be e'er esteem'd;
On his shrine shall holy incense flame.
Each letter's gold that spells his precious name!

Melibaeus.

I envy not, but 'midst such wasteful wars
Admire your peace and wail our hapless stars,
We, our sad flocks ingining sorrow drive,
This ewe I lead, alas is scarce alive,
She hardly moves, two infant lambs she mourns,
Their piercing cries her frantic moan returns:
To me these woes you hapless oak proclaim'd,
When red-wing'd lightning 'midst its ruin flam'd.

I heard the crash—I heard the raven's scream—
This robb'd my slumber of its golden dream.
But tell me Tityrus whence such blessings come?

Tityrus.

I thought our Mantua might compare with Rome,
As smaller things with great we oft compare;
So lambs alike their milky mothers are;
But peerless Rome above our Mantua shines,
As cypress forests o'er the creeping vines.

Melibaeus.

What lured you hence to Rome's imperial towers?

Tityrus.

The noblest blessing heaven on mortal pours,
Blest Liberty! the Godless late appears,
To bless the remnant of my silvery years,
Now, bent no more by darkling fortunes frowns
I rest my head on plenty's feathery downs;
'Till now my flocks no golden wealth return'd.

Melibaeus.

We wondered why your Amarillis mourn'd;
The fruit unmind'd dropt from every tree,
The beauteous damsel pined away for thee!
She taught the lonely shades for thee to mourn,
The bubbling fountains sigh'd for thy return.

Tityrus.

What could I here? to fruitless labor chain'd,
Elsewhere no glimpse of smiling hope remain'd;
'Twas there the bliss-bestowing youth appear'd
Who angel like our sad dispondence heard,
'Go tune thy pipe' the god-like youth decreed
'Go feed thy flocks where they are wont to feed.'

Melibaeus.

O blest old man! thy bleating flocks remain,
Thy mossy dells, thy fields of mellowing grain,
Far round thy bounds, in undulating line,
The honey breathing golden willows shine,
Thence swarming bees stream through the air
Perfumes (blooms)
Sipp'd from the bosoms sweet of thousand
Their breezy murmurs lull to rest the swain—
From grove to grove the turtle doves complain,
The distant coo the woodman's songs re-
sounds,
Your blest retreat in tranquil peace abounds.

Tityrus.

Light wing'd air the fleecy droves shall feed,
The silvery fish in woodland bowers shall breed,
North change to South, the Orient beam to West,
Ere his dear image quit my grateful breast.

Melibaeus.

But we alas are doom'd an exile band,
Fainting to wander o'er the burning sand,
O'er wilds and seas to Britain's lonely isle,
Nor meet one friendly sympathizing smile!
Ah! wilt thou ever, O prophetic time
E'er more return us to our native clime?
May we, these cots with tufted grass o'ergrown,
These lovely fields our hands so oft have sown
E'er see again? Ah no! sad wretched swains,
Barbarian soldiers ravage all your plains,
With bloody hands pluck your crystal springs
Ye Gods what miseries civil discord brings!
Away my droves! once happier flocks away,
No more my goats you crop the dewy spray!
No more, reclining 'neath this cave, serene
I see you heading down the summit lean,
In dread suspense, to taste the spicy thyme,
No more these honey-bosom'd cliffs you climb—
No more I wander thro' this willow dell,
Sweet scenes adieu, sweet warbling lute farewell!

Tityrus.

This night at least Melibaeus be my guest,
On this green couch compose thy troubled breast,
The fairest fruit my darling trees afford,
And luscious cream shall grace our rural board;
For see the gliding shadows shoot away,
And spires of smoke o'er distant villas play.

"TRIFLES LIGHT AS AIR."

BEAUTY.

"DO not, (says Dr. Johnson) forbear to marry a beautiful woman, if you can find such, out of a fancy that she will be less constant than an ugly one; or condemn yourself to the society of coarseth and vulgarity for fear of the expences or other dangers of elegance and personal charms, which have been always acknowledged as a positive good, and for the want of which there should be always given some weighty compensation. I have however (continues he) seen some prudent fellows who forbore to connect themselves with beauty, lest coque-try should be near, and with wit or birth, lest insolence should lurk behind them, till they have been forced by their diffection to linger life away in tasteless stupidity, and choofe to count the moments by remembrance of pain, instead of enjoyments of pleasure."

Lexington Fall RACES,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURY.

JOSEPH GREEN, BEGS leave to acquaint his friends and the public in general, that with the assistance of a Gentleman lately from London, he has commenced the making of Patent Piano Fortes, With additional keys; which from simplicity of action, brilliancy of tone, equality of touch, and excellent quality of standing long in tune, are allowed by the first professional men, to be far superior to any before invented.

J. GREEN having observed, that Piano Fortes constructed in the usual way for this country, are not calculated to resist the effects of so changeable an atmosphere, has manufactured the above instruments of solid materials, upon such a secure plan, as to remove all doubts of their durability.

Orders addressed to him at the Manufactory, on main street Lexington, (where a specimen may be seen,) will be thankfully received.
LEXINGTON, Sept. 1805.

100 DOLLARS REWARD.

AN away from the subscriber, living near Greenville, Jefferson county, Mississippi Territory, a Negro Man, named who the subscriber purchased from Thomas B. Scott and Robert Scott of Jessamine county, Kentucky. He is a well made black fellow, about 24 years of age, about 5 feet 8 or 9 inches high, he stoops a little in his shoulders and has a soft speaking voice. He made his first appearance in September or October 1803, and was taken up in Robertson county, state of Tennessee, the 21st of July, 1804, where he remained until March 1805, at which time, Robert Childress, took him on board his boat, to convey him to his owner, and brought him near the mouth of Bayou Pierre creek, where he again made his escape. His clothing at that time not known to the subscriber. I will give the above reward to any person who will apprehend said negro out of the limits of this Territory, and will deliver him to me at my house, or Twenty Dollars for securing him in any jail, and giving me information thereof, so that I get him again; or Twenty Dollars to any person who will apprehend said negro within this Territory, and will deliver him to me at my plantation.

CHARLES,

PROPOSALS.

By F. PENISTON, FOR PUBLISHING BY SUBSCRIPTION AT ST. LOUIS, A NEWSPAPER, TO BE ENTITLED THE LOUISIANA HERALD.

IN prosecuting the publication of the LOUISIANA HERALD, the Editor will lay before the public as speedily as possible, the most interesting foreign and domestic occurrences. Care will be taken to relate all local events, with correctness and precision. A statement of the New-Orleans, Natchez, and different markets of Upper Louisiana, will occasionally be given. In these features which characterize the political sentiments of an Editor, a careful solicitude will be exhibited for the honor, prosperity and independence of the Union. An impartial and deliberate investigation of all political questions, will be preferred to heat or passion. TRUTH shall be its GUIDE—LIBERTY its OBJECT. Personal invective, scurrilous or defamatory publications shall be sedulously avoided.—That invaluable liberty of scrutinizing the conduct of those in whom the public faith is pledged, will be maintained sacred.

Communications from gentlemen of information will be thankfully received. THE LOUISIANA HERALD will be published weekly, with a neat type on a royal sheet, at Three Dollars per ann. payable in advance; or for an attested note of Four Dollars, to be paid at the expiration of the year.
